2nd One-Day Symposium
Developmental Care
in Neonatology and Pediatrics

Wednesday, 15th December, 2010

Geneva University Hospitals (HUG)
Marcel Jenny Auditorium
Rue Gabrielle-Perret-Gentil 4
1205 Genève
“The most important part of educational work is not to teach the child something, but to offer him the means of becoming active in his environment. In this perspective, a stable and predictive environment is essential. The therapists must establish a method of regulation rather than a source of knowledge.”
André Bullinger

The notion of how environmental factors affect health outcomes of high-risk infants has its origins in developmental pediatrics when the focus shifted from reducing infant mortality to improving the quality of life for survivors. Developmental care aims at modulating the care environment in such a way that the patient’s own developmental capacities are encouraged despite illness & disease.

This 2\textsuperscript{nd} day on Developmental Care in Neonatology and Pediatrics aims to:
\begin{itemize}
  \item Reunite pioneers and teams active in this field
  \item Create a reference base supporting the clinical applications, training, research and information in the form of an European Association for Developmental care.
\end{itemize}
